BECOME A REDDITOR

s05e15 Unbelievable, and just imagine the logistics of weightlessness. And of course, this could have literally millions of applications here on Earth -- everything from watchmaking to watch repair

↓ There's something that I've found the writers of the Simpsons during this era did perfectly that is incredibly hard to do. Writing "boring" funny dialogue like this. For some reason, it's boring, but funny at the same time.

↓ Facts are meaningless. You can use facts to prove anything that's even remotely true. Facts, schmacts.

↓ I hate the whole "Simpsons have sucked since exactly 4:18 July 19" nonsense, but I watched the other night and it was the exact opposite. Tons of gags, non of which were funny. I felt like I was watching a zany amateur comedy sketch. I rarely watch anymore, but I hope that's not standard.

↓ Marge: When you don't take advantage of an opportunity you can end up regretting it for the rest of your life.

Homer: You're right, Marge. Just like the time I could've met Mr T. at the mall. The entire day, I kept saying, "I'll go a little later. I'll go a little later." And then when I got there, they told me he just left. And when I asked a mall guy if he would ever come back again he said he didn't know. Well, I'm never gonna let something like that happen again! I'm going into space right now!
