

Wikispooks:About

Wikispooks* is an open licensed, open source encyclopedia of deep politics. This whole site is freely downloadable.^[1]

Our 656 registered editors have made 20,035 pages (9,538 people, 2,691 groups, 838 events...) supplemented by 1,614 third party documents.

Wikispooks was established in 2010 as a collaborative space for the joint re-examination of recent history.^[2] We research people and groups not subject to proper scrutiny by corporate media and as such, poorly treated by Wikipedia. Wikispooks is particularly focused on those official narratives which do not seem to fit the facts, such as the 9/11 event and concepts such as the "war on terror" or the "war on drugs".

Why Wikispooks?

We are an open source wiki, so unlike Wikipedia all changes to pages are recorded and publicly available. Wikispooks has no bias towards commercially-controlled media or such other establishment institutions - sources are welcomed to the extent that they help shed light on the murky business of deep politics, which by design aims to be difficult to fathom. As a 100% volunteer project, Wikispooks is not beholden to the special interests which define the corporate media.

Wikipedia's editorial policies on "notability" and "reliability" make it little more than just one more corporate media outlet for the the official (i.e. establishment-controlled) narrative, which the US Deep state's Operation Mockingbird has been targeting for decades. Moreover it is censored and as of February 2018 its `robots.txt` file disallowed archival programs from recording page histories, so as to obscure its censorship.

Editorial Policy

Wikispooks encourages editors to be critical of the evidence presented. Unlike corporate media such as Wikipedia, this site does not have a "by domain" policy of deeming information either reliable or unreliable. Instead, evidence should be addressed on its merits. Wikispooks does not assume good faith on the part of authorities. If observable reality conflicts with the official narrative, the former deserves priority. Especially in the case of deep politics, official narratives deserve a close scrutiny which the commercially-controlled media seldom if ever gives them.^[4] Wikispooks therefore does not aim for Wikipedia's (status-quo friendly) "Neutral Point of View".^[5] Since newspapers and broadcasters (like governments) can and do lie with impunity, it is naive to assume mere publication of information to be a reliable indication of veracity.
