

As It Happens

with Carol Off and Jeff Douglas

Wednesday March 30, 2016

U of T president rejects calls to divest from fossil fuel industry

It looked as though the University of Toronto was on the cusp of divesting its holdings in the fossil fuel industry -- a first for a Canadian university. But in a surprise announcement Wednesday, the school's president, Meric Gertler, said the school has no plans to divest.

He told As It Happens host Carol Off that there are more effective ways to "save the planet" — and divestment isn't necessarily the answer.

"What we've decided to do is come forward with a plan that is actually going to make a difference," he says.

Gertler's announcement shocked many environmental activists and students at U of T, who had been urging the university to divest from fossil fuels for years. In December, an advisory committee, established by Gertler himself, had recommended the school go ahead with divestment. It became known worldwide as the "Toronto Principle."

Nathan Lemphers

@enlem

Follow

#UofT Pres. Gertler ignores own committee's advice to #divest from fossil fuels #onpoli #cdnpoli president.utoronto.ca/secure-content...

9:26 AM - 30 Mar 2016

7

6

But three months after the recommendations were released, Gertler says he's concluded there are better ways for U of T to reduce its greenhouse gas emissions.

"We're actually a pretty small player in the investment market, but we're a big university with a lot of depth and resources and we can actually have a huge impact by doubling down on research and education focused on addressing the challenges of climate change," he says.

He added the school could also "shrink its own carbon footprint as an organization."

Steve Easterbrook

@SMEasterbrook

Follow

Gertler's real message to students: Your education is being funded at the cost of a stable climate. toronto350.org/wrong-side-of-...

9:53 AM - 30 Mar 2016

UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO PRESIDENT REJEC...

Leadership in climate action.

toronto350.org

11

8

Gertler doesn't support a blanket divestment policy on fossil fuel companies, but he says it could be considered on a "firm by firm basis."

"Look, just because a firm happens to be on the blacklist today doesn't mean it can't move to the green list tomorrow, if it changes the way it does its business. That's what I mean by taking a dynamic approach."

The initial response from divestment organizers was disappointment. In a statement, Toronto350.org wrote, "[Our] school should not be trying to profit from the oil sands and fracking companies that are actively thwarting progress on climate change."

Toronto350.org

@Toronto350

Follow

The @UofT expert committee endorsed divestment. The President's response is a disappointment: toronto350.org/wrong-side-of-... @350 @350Canada

3:42 AM - 30 Mar 2016

UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO PRESIDENT REJEC...

Leadership in climate action.

toronto350.org

27

13

most recent

Meet Lord Buckethead, the U.K. election's intergalactic spacelord

'Appeal to the young people': Millennials put their vote behind Jeremy Corbyn

June 8, 2017 episode transcript